

ESKER HELPS BUSINESSES QUIT PAPER

Esker, global leaders in document process automation, have helped businesses 'Quit paper' and make significant cost savings following the launch of its innovative new mail service.

Esker launched its 'on demand' service from its UK office 12 months ago in a bid to help businesses 'Quit Paper', thereby, eliminating the number of errors and reducing the costs that go with dependence on paper as well as reducing their carbon footprint.

Over the past year, Esker has transformed the way that many local businesses manage their out-going mail. The 'on demand' service allows businesses to automate and outsource their document delivery by mail - saving money, time, and paper in the process.

Such has been the growth of Esker's 'on demand' services for the delivery of business documents that the company is set to expand its mail facility with the creation of two new posts.

With Esker's 'Mail on Demand' service, any transactional documents such as invoices, statements, remittances, reminders, etc can be delivered straight from an organisation's business applications without the need for dealing with paper, printers, envelopes, folding, franking and posting.

Worldwide customers can also deliver mail to the UK and benefit from local postage rates and a significant reduction in delivery time.

The UK is the first deregulated postal delivery market in Europe and offers three different postal operators. Esker is able to route its customers' mail distribution to the lowest cost postal operator and pass the savings on to its customers.

Commenting on the success of the new mail facility, Emmanuel Olivier, COO of Esker said:

"We are delighted that the success of our 'on demand' service has helped so many businesses to re-evaluate their paper-led methods of document processing and save money through an automated approach."

"Since it was launched in March 2010, our new mailing facility has gone from strength to strength and is enabling business to implement more efficient and effective working practices through the automation of traditional paper based document processing, which is imperative in the current economic climate."

"Esker's worldwide network of mail processing facilities processed more than 100 million pages in 2010 and this figure is set to increase still further as organisations become more aware of the cost and efficiency savings available to them," added Olivier.
